

Call for papers at the 69th International Communication Association (ICA) Conference, May 2019 in Washington DC (USA).

Each year IALSP is allocated one session (75 minutes) at the International Communication Association (ICA) conference. This session allows us to continue a tradition of collegiality among our members, recruit new members, network, and showcase our work outside of our organization.

In 2019, ICA will be in Washington DC (May 24-28). We anticipate that this will be a very popular and exciting conference. We would like to use our panel to showcase papers that were presented at ICLASP16 in Edmonton, Alberta.

If you would like to present your ICLASP16 research (in its original or updated form) at ICA, please submit your work for consideration by 19 October.

Submissions will be considered by an IALSP scientific committee made up of members of the Executive who will choose a maximum of eight papers to present at our IALSP panel at ICA in Washington DC.

While we cannot offer funding to participants, we hope that you will find the opportunity to present your work to a diverse audience, to receive scholarly feedback on your research, and to network with other scholars a good incentive. Below is the title of the proposed panel, the aim of the panel and a brief abstract that outlines the key panel features.

Please also see the submission criteria at the end of this email.

TITLE

Showcasing ICLASP16 Research: Selected Projects from the International Association of Language and Social Psychology.

In this (high density) panel, we feature papers from the International Conference on Language and Social Psychology (ICLASP 16).

ABSTRACT

This panel will reflect the scholarship of IALSP members who adopt a language and social psychology (LSP) approach to communication research. This approach highlights the dynamic aspects of communication and the role of motivations, cognitions and beliefs in shaping discourse. The selected papers will showcase the application of this LSP approach across communication contexts that overlap and extend the interests of the International Communication Association. The 2019 ICA theme “Communication Beyond Boundaries” provides an ideal forum to demonstrate IALSP’s diverse communication endeavors. A competitive selection of complete papers will be chosen by representatives from the current IALSP executive and will reflect the different research interests, methods, and contexts that intersect our Association. These include: health, culture and ethnicity, linguistic landscapes, intergenerational communication, intergroup communication, language attitudes, language accommodation, language learning and maintenance, identity, gender and communication, and a range of methods from new qualitative data analysis techniques to focus groups, case studies, observational and ethnographic studies, and a variety of cutting edge quantitative approaches.

SUBMISSION INSTRUCTIONS:

Submit an abstract (250 words max.) of a paper that was presented at ICLASP16 in Edmonton, Alberta. Please also indicate whether this paper was presented as a completed project or a work in progress (WIP). Priority will be given to WIP papers that are now complete.

NOTE THE FOLLOWING:

1. Competitive Selection – we are looking for a range of papers that showcase our diversity.
2. Committed to presenting at a high density panel, up to 8 participants selected
3. Deadline for receiving papers to be considered for ICA 2019 is 19 October, 2018.
4. The successful applicants will be notified in early November.
5. By submitting a paper, you agree that should your paper be accepted, you are committing to attend the conference in Washington DC in May 2019. This is a firm commitment.
6. Please submit your paper to Jessica Gasiorek at gasiorek@hawaii.edu, who will forward it to the scientific committee.
